ABSTRACT

Non-governmental U.S. organizations involved in U.S.-USSR studies and exchange activities are described. A total of 187 groups identified as being engaged to some degree in Soviet-American work were sent questionnaires. The response rate was 70 percent. Descriptions of the 131 responding groups are provided in organizational profiles that comprise the major portion of the publication. Information is provided concerning organization activities involving the United States and Russia, staff time and budget devoted to U.S.-USSR activities, the nature and extent of contact between the group and Soviet organizations, and publications relating to U.S.-USSR relations. A summary analysis of the information collected is also presented. For example, 53 of the organizations are involved with exchange programs, 46 with public education, 25 with teaching and research, and 7 with national/international policy. Most work on very small budgets. The appendices contain the names and addresses of all organizations surveyed, cross references of organizations by types of activities, a report on U.S. government activities with the USSR, and the survey form. ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This HANDBOOK has been produced from material collected in an information survey conducted in February, March and April, 1983. The survey was initiated and sponsored by the Institute for Soviet-American Relations (ISAR) in cooperation with the following organizations and individuals: The Circle Fund, Crosscurrents International Institute, Esalen Institute Soviet-American Exchange Program, The Max and Anna Levinson Foundation, Ploughshares Fund, Threshold Foundation, Tides Foundation, Dr. Josephine Murray, Salk, Ward and Salk, and an anonymous donor.

Valuable advice on the project was generously provided by the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies (Princeton University), the W. Averell Harriman Institute for Advanced Study of the Soviet Union (Columbia University), the Center for Foreign Policy Development (Brown University), and the Center for Population Research (Georgetown University).

Each HANDBOOK profile entry was provided by the organization itself. Dissemination of the information, preparation of the profile on each group, and compilation of data described in the OVERVIEW were conducted by the staff of The Forum Institute under the supervision of Ms. Nancy Graham.

HIGHLIGHTS

US-USSR INFORMATION SURVEY

The US-USSR survey has produced a wealth of statistics and information about the 131 responding organizations. The OVERVIEW section (which follows) contains a brief quantitative summary of the data collected. It purposely does not contain detailed qualitative analysis.

The Institute for Soviet American Relations (ISAR), sponsor of the survey, intends to review and engage in continuing substantive analysis of the data. Groups interested in particular questions and those wishing to contribute their own analyses are encouraged to contact ISAR at 2738 McKinley St., Washington, DC 20015.

Preliminary review of the statistical information, however, does raise a number of basic questions which suggest future paths of inquiry for those interested in furthering Soviet-American relations. Examples of important questions which suggest the need for more intensive analysis include:

- Many of the surveyed groups have very small staffs and budgets. What are the potentials and limitations for information-sharing, networking and cooperation among groups in this field?

- Many groups involved in Soviet-American relations appear to have limited opportunity to travel to the Soviet Union and do not have Russian language speakers on staff. Are there ways of increasing opportunities for travel and language training for such groups?

- A relatively large number of the surveyed groups indicate they are working on some issue areas while very few groups appear to be concentrating on other issues. Are human and financial resources more available for some issues than for others? If so, are there ways of encouraging greater resources for a broader range of issues?

- Public education in the United States about the Soviet Union and exchanges between the two countries appear to be the primary activities and future interests of many of the groups surveyed. What opportunities or limitations are there for significantly expanding and improving public education and exchange activities?

- Most of the surveyed groups have very small budgets for US-USSR activities. Are there ways of spending the limited resources more efficiently? How can financial resources for nongovernmental initiatives in this field be substantially increased? How can small grants be leveraged? How can more corporate, labor, church, membership, and direct mail fundraising be encouraged?

OVERVIEW

SURVEY OF SOVIET-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES OF NONGOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

American public interest in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has evolved fitfully over the past four decades. During this period, there have been many efforts in this country to study the USSR and to stimulate dialogue and exchange with Soviet institutions, leadership and peoples. These activities have been initiated by a broad range of government agencies and nongovernmental organizations, including research institutes, universities, education, trade, professional, religious, arms control, peace and many other groups.

Since 1980, official government relations between the United States and the Soviet Union have been restricted significantly. At the same time, new attempts have been made among nongovernmental groups in the United States to increase their activities and contacts with Soviet organizations and citizens. To understand better the nature and scope of these activities and initiatives, a group of funders requested The Forum Institute to conduct an information survey of nongovernmental organizations in the United States which currently are working on Soviet studies and/or Soviet-American relations.

Organizations were asked to provide the following information in response to the survey: (i) a short narrative description of the organization; (ii) an indication of three critical activities the group believes should be undertaken to affect significantly US-USSR relations; (iii) an estimate of staff time devoted to each of 22 specific issues and 9 specific activities; (iv) the amount of the group's annual budget devoted to work involving the Soviet Union and its sources of revenue for such activities; (v) indications of the nature and extent of contact between the group and Soviet organizations; and (vi) lists of publications on matters relating to US-USSR relations produced by the group.

The purpose of this OVERVIEW is to present a summary analysis of the information collected. Brief descriptions of each group's work are contained in the ORGANIZATIONAL PROFILES which follow on pages 10 to 208. In reading the OVERVIEW, several important factors about the survey should be taken into account.

First, although a great many nongovernmental groups working in this field responded to the survey, for a variety of reasons, some have not been able or have chosen not to do so.

Second, the survey was sent to a broad range of nongovernmental groups involved in US-USSR activities and studies. However, it was not sent to (a) corporate and business groups which trade with the USSR; (b) US government agencies; (c) international organizations; and (d) schools and universities not having Soviet research and/or exchange programs. The activities of these groups could be the subject of future surveys.

Third, Appendix III attached to this report contains a summary review of the nature and current status of multi-national and bilateral governmental programs which have contributed to peaceful relationships between the US and USSR over the past 50 years.

Fourth, in most instances, the quantitative data supplied by the groups regarding staff time devoted to various issues and activities and about budgets are estimates not precise calculations.

Fifth, the information provided by the groups in response to the survey is a representation about activity in a rapidly changing environment. Thus, this OVERVIEW analysis is of time-limited value, and information about the groups should be continually updated to reflect future developments.

Sixth, information gleaned from a survey such as this can help us better understand the general scope, composition and direction of nongovernmental initiatives to promote better Soviet-American relations. It must not obscure the unique contribution of each organization operating in this field. For these and other reasons, this OVERVIEW cannot and should not be used as a measuring stick for evaluating the qualitative performance of any group.

The information survey could not have been conducted without the generous cooperation of the responding organizations. This HANDBOOK has been produced in the hope that by documenting the tireless efforts of many groups - to study the Soviet Union, to produce and distribute public education materials, and to encourage a dialogue between leaders and citizens of our two countries - they will be rewarded, in the months and years ahead, with greatly increased support of all kinds from institutions and individuals. Information on any group included in this HANDBOOK may be obtained by contacting the group directly.

II. THE SURVEY UNIVERSE

A preliminary list of several hundred nongovernmental groups which were believed to have some interest or involvement in Soviet-American activities was compiled from suggestions made by various organizations and individuals. Contact with these groups in February and March 1983 revealed that 187 of them currently are engaged at least to some degree in Soviet-American work. Many of those originally identified, but not pursuing specific projects, hope to be active again in this area in the near future.

A list of names and addresses of the 187 non-governmental groups which have identified themselves as involved in Soviet-American activities is attached as Appendix I. Additional responses are expected in the coming weeks. Of the 187 groups contacted, 131 or 70% have responded to date. The participating organizations can be broadly categorized as follows, according to what appears to be their primary activity (See also Appendix II):

	Number of Groups
Exchange Programs	53
Public Education	46
Teaching and Research	25
National/International Policy	7

III. THE RESPONDENTS: SOME ORGANIZATIONAL CHARACTERISTICS */

1. The majority of respondents began their Soviet-American activities in the past thirteen years:

Year US-USSR Activities Begun	Number of Groups Reporting
Before 1945	5
1946-1960	21
1961-1970	6
1970-1980	36
1980 to present	39
	107 of 131 responding

2. Ninety of the responding organizations have two or fewer full-time, paid employees working on Soviet-American projects:

Number of Full-time Employees Working on US-USSR Activities	Number of Groups Reporting
0-2	90
3-5	16
6-10	5
11-25	2
26-100	4
over 100	0
	117 of 131 responding

*/ Many organizations did not respond to all of the survey questions. Therefore, whenever appropriate, the number of respondents to particular questions is indicated.

3. Eighty-five groups indicated the percentage of their total staff time devoted to Soviet-American activities:*/

% of Total Staff Time Devoted to Soviet-American Activities	Number of Groups Reporting
less than 10	31
10-25	16
26-49	4
50-75	9
100	24

4. Eight-four organizations responded to survey questions seeking information about the number of days their staff spends in the Soviet Union. Of those reporting, 50 or 60%, had staff in the USSR in the past year and 24, or 40%, of the groups did not.

5. Eighty-seven organizations indicated whether or not they had Soviet language speakers on their staffs. Of those responding, 55, or 63%, claimed one or more Soviet language speakers and 32, or 37%, reported that they had none.

6. Ninety-six organizations indicated those activities they consider critical to the development of US-USSR relations. The vast majority focussed on the areas of public education and exchange programs.

*/ Most responding groups are multi-issue organizations which spend only part of their time on US-USSR relations. Relatively few of the groups are devoted exclusively to US-USSR relations.

IV. ISSUES

Groups working on Soviet-American activities concentrate on a wide variety of issues. The following chart indicates the number of groups active in the various issue areas and the percentage of total staff time each of the 100 responding organizations devote to tnat issue:*/

ISSUE	Number of Groups Reporting Involvement	Estimated Percent Total Annual Staff Time - All Groups
NATIONAL SECURITY/ ARMS CONTROL	39	20.0
OTHER (PRIMARILY LANGUAGE TRAINING)	14	13.0
WORLD RELATIONS	28	9.5

OCEANS/MARITIME	1	.1

*/ These 100 groups devote an estimated combined total of about 260 staff person years to all of the issues and activities indicated on the issues and activities charts.

V. ACTIVITIES

The staff of each organization engages in a number of different activities in pursuit of its goals and objectives. The following chart presents the total number of groups involved in each activity and the percentage of total annual staff time devoted by all 100 groups involved in each activity.

Activity	Number of Groups Reporting Activity	Approximate Percentage Total Annual Staff Time - All Groups

VI. BUDGET AND SOURCES OF REVENUE

Annual budget information for 1982 and 1983 for Soviet-American activities was provided by approximately 70 of the 132 responding groups. The following table summarizes the available budget information:

Size of Budget	Number of Groups 1982	1983
$0 - 100,000	46	47
$101 - 250,000	9	12
$251 - 499,000	6	5

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1972/1983

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The American Field Service International/Intercultural, Inc. endeavors to develop cross-cultural understanding and education between the peoples of the two nations.

American Field Service has at present two programs:

1) A US-Soviet high school teachers program, in which Soviet teachers teach in the school systems here and 8 US teachers do the same in the USSR for about 3 months. The program was initiated in 1972 and is ongoing.

2) A young adult leadership dialogue here and in the Soviet Union annually, in which young adults in leadership positions in governmental, nongovernmental, and political fields meet with their counterparts in the Soviet Union. The program was initiated in 1983.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1948

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies (AAASS) is the leading US organization of scholars, researchers, public servants and professionals in Soviet and East European studies. Its several thousand members come primarily from higher education institutions, research institutions and government agencies; they represent a broad spectrum of academic disciplines and cover all fields of interest relating to the Soviet Union and the countries of Eastern Europe.

The Association was established almost four decades ago to promote and advance Slavic studies in the United States. It serves these objectives by publishing the major interdisciplinary journal in the field, The Slavic Review: a quarterly AAASS Newsletter; and an important reference work annual, The American Bibliography of Slavic and East European Studies.

The AAASS represents the American community of Slavicists both nationally and internationally. It sponsors a nationwide convention each year and in 1985 will serve as host in Washington, DC, for the quinquennial International Congress for Soviet and East European Studies.

There are nine regular subdivisions of the AAASS nationwide which sponsor local activities. In addition, over a dozen scholarly organizations, focusing on a specific interest or area within the field, are affiliated with the AAASS and participate in its national conventions. A number of standing and ad hoc committees deal with issues of general concern.

Among the activities sponsored by the AAASS for the benefit of the field over the past decade has been the work of its Research and Development Committee. This Committee, composed of scholars drawn from across the country, has been responsible for the award and distribution of grant funds to researchers and workers in Slavic studies. At present the Committee's funds are virtually exhausted, and new sources of funding are sought.

The AAASS has recently taken the initiative with respect to a serious problem that has developed in the area of Russian language studies. Over the past decade the number of students enrolled in Russian language classes in institutions of higher learning in this country has declined steeply. The Association has just established a National Committee for Russian Language Study, which is now working to reverse the downward trend. The major nationwide effort required to achieve this objective has created new needs for additional resources.

The Association is currently involved in a major fundraising campaign to enable it to continue to provide leadership in the field and to advance scholarly study of the USSR and Eastern Europe in the United States.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The American Council of Teachers of Russian is a national, non-profit educational association and academic exchange organization specializing in the area of Russian language training, Russian literature, and Russian culture. Uniting more than 750 individual and institutional members from throughout the US, the ACTR seeks to further mutual understanding between the US and the USSR through advanced-level training in language and culture.

The Council's major activities include:

1) Providing opportunities for Americans to study Russian language, literature, area studies, linguistics, and pedagogy at advanced levels through summer, semester, and academic year programs at the Pushkin Institute in Moscow.

2) Fostering contacts and exchange of ideas among Russian specialists from around the world, including the USSR, through joint publication of articles, surveys, collections textbooks and the regular organization of programs and international scholarly conferences, such as the Soviet-American Conferences on Russian of 1974, 1981, and 1984.

CONTACT: John Hurson
Acting Executive Director

TOTAL STAFF: 5
US-USSR RELATIONS: N/A (currently)

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1970

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Council's programs are mainly exchanges designed to show the visiting delegation (US or Soviet) the workings of the Soviet/American political systems. The Council seeks to establish ties between the two peoples and to offer both sides the opportunity to see the people behind the policies and statements and to hear first-hand the rationale leading to those policies.

The Council's constituency is "young political leaders," people involved on all levels of government who may become the leaders of tomorrow. The Council conducts bilateral exchanges with the Soviets, delegations of 10-14 who visit 4-5 different cities and towns on a 2-3 week tour. Delegations meet with their political peers and seniors and discuss all topics relating to the domestic and foreign policies of one or both nations. Between 1971 and 1979 there were 12 US delegations with 165 participants to the Soviet Union and 16 Soviet delegations with more that 150 participants to the US. Subsequent programs, although funded, have not taken place.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1973

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The American Library Association (ALA) is the oldest and largest library association in the world. Its near 40,000 members represent all types of libraries - state, public, school and academic; special libraries serving persons in government, commerce, armed services, hospitals, prisons and other institutions. The Association is the chief advocate for the people of the United States to achieve and maintain high quality library and information services--whether by protecting the right to read, educating librarians, improving library services or making information accessible to everyone.

ALA has no specific program with the USSR, but has carried out an international relations program for many years with a number of countries around the world. However, in 1976, based on earlier discussions (1973) between the ALA's Executive Director and the Chief of the Library Division of the Ministry of Culture of the USSR, an exchange program for librarians was initiated under the Helsinki Agreement. Topics for future exchange meetings were identified. In 1978 a Soviet delegation was hosted by the ALA for planning purposes. It was agreed to raise the level of contracts to that of formal seminars providing opportunities to exchange information on the activities performed in the two countries. The first seminar took place in May 1979 in Washington, DC. An exchange seminar was planned for 1980. However, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan prevented further action.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1980

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The American Soviet Cultural Exchange is a non-governmental, non-profit US organization which promotes unofficial cultural exchanges between the peoples of the USA and the USSR. ASCE believes that despite on-going tensions between the world's superpowers, longterm relations can be improved and peaceful change fostered if enough personal contacts between people of both countries take place now.

The activities of ASCE which foster these goals are aimed at bringing Soviet and American people together for meaningful interaction on the basis of what they have in common - professions, avocations, and mutual interests. ASCE sponsors visits by Americans, particularly special interest groups to the USSR. In return, ASCE hosts Soviet officials in this country, helping them to meet with American counterparts.

The historical Editors Conference, held recently at Colby-Sawyer College in New Hampshire was successfully coordinated by ASCE for the New England Society of Newspaper Editors. ASCE assisted by organizing the conference and providing interpreters experienced in facilitating dialogue. The US delegation was made up of prominent New England editors from major and regional newspapers. The Soviet delegation included top editors from Pravda, Izvestia, Leningradskaya Pravda, Tass, the Moscow News, Tiesa, Robochaya Gazeta, Socialist Industry and Life Abroad - all members of the Union of Journalists.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Amnesty International monitors human rights in the USSR as everywhere. It is a worldwide movement which is independent of any government, political faction, ideology, economic interest, or religious creed. It plays a specific role within the overall spectrum of human rights work. The activities of the organization focus strictly on prisoners:

- It seeks the release of men and women detained anywhere for their beliefs, color, sex, ethnic origin, language, or religion, provided they have neither used nor advocated violence. These are termed "Prisoners of Conscience."

- It advocates fair and early trials for all political prisoners and works on behalf of such persons detained without charge or without trial.

- It opposes the death penalty and torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of all prisoners without reservations.

Amnesty International acts on the behalf of the UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international instruments. Through practical work for prisoners within its mandate. AI participates in the wider promotion and protection of human rights in the civil, political, economic, social, and cultural spheres.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1966

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus is a bipartisan caucus made up of members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives concerned with foreign and military policy. Open to any Member of Congress who subscribes to its general purposes of coordinating Congressional concern for world peace into legislative action to promote international cooperation, to strengthen international institutions, and to control the spread of arms, the Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus is a unique coalition of legislators working together. It presently numbers over 100 members.

The Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus' activities are both informational and legislative. It works through its several committees, task forces and staff to provide:

1) weekly legislative publications which give information on major foreign and military legislation being considered in House and Senate committees;

2) a monthly Speaker's Series on foreign and military policy issues;

3) research and advice on legislative strategy, as well as analytical reports on major foreign or military issues;

4) draft ammendments, testimony preparation, letters to the President recommending policy changes;

5) background papers, fact sheets or memos on upcoming committee or floor action of importance to members; and

6) briefings or meetings on timely foreign policy issues or arms control questions.

The Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus as an organization takes no position on legislative issues.

The Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus was previously known as Members of Congress for Peace through Law; the name was changed in early 1983. The organization was formed informally in 1959, as a small breakfast-discussion group, by Senator Joseph Clark (D-PA), Representative Bradford Morse (R-Mass), and others. It hired its first staff member in 1966.

US-USSR RELATIONS: 1

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: mid-1970s

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Arms Control Association does not have a formal program in US-USSR relations but rather a strong and continuing interest in facilitating and strengthening relations between arms control and security specialists of the two countries through participation in other programs and by taking advantage of opportunities as they arise. When appropriate, efforts have been made to include Soviet representation in Association programs, such as Conferences of Experts and the New Faces Conference program for young scholars.

The constituency involved in the US is the community of arms control specialists, in particular those concentrating on Soviet studies. To the extent that one exists, the presumptive contituency in the Soviet Union is the counterpart of this group, including representatives of the Institute of the USA and Canada, IMEMO, and the few international associates (foreign members) of the Association, plus, less frequently, officials of the Soviet government.

Activities include participation in conferences, extensive but informal contacts when opportunities arise between directors or staff of ACA and Soviet specialists, and the exchange of publications and research materials on request. The Association staff has also, on occasion, written articles seeking to explain Soviet policy to an American audience and, much more frequently, taken advantage of the contacts with Soviets and formal training in Soviet studies to speak on Soviet policy to American audiences. While the total amount of time devoted to these activities is small, inasmuch as they build on an existing base of research, they form an important theme in the Association's analytic and educational programs.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Bridges for Peace seeks to improve understanding between the peoples of the US and USSR through exchange programs, conferences and publications. Special emphasis is on the need for citizens in both societies to understand the other side's perception of the nuclear arms race and to attempt to influence the public policy of both nations to stop the arms race.

The primary issue addressed by the program is the proposal of a nuclear arms freeze and other nuclear arms control proposals. A related issue is whether the national policies of the US and the USSR are essentially defensive or aggressive in character. Beyond those two big issues, Bridges for Peace is concerned with the nature of press coverage of each other's society, the character of the books that describe the other's society, etc. The constituency of Bridges for Peace in the USA is church and peace groups. In the USSR, Bridges for Peace is in touch with the Soviet Peace Committee, the US-USSR Friendship Society, the Committee on Youth Organization, and the Soviet Women's Committee.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Business Executives for National Security, Inc. is a national, non-profit membership organization of active and retired business leaders who are pooling their skills to help the nation end the threat of nuclear war and strengthen its national security with cost-effective alternatives to the economically destructive arms race. BENS wants America's national security policies to provide real security - defined not just by the size of the arsenal but also by the strength of the economy and the institutions, and by the morale of the American people.

BENS seeks practical, prudent steps to protect the US way of life by reducing the risks of nuclear war while strengthening the economy. BENS members are concerned that the current plans for unprecedented levels of military spending will weaken the investment climate and hinder capital formation by keeping interest rates artificially high and increasing the pressure for higher taxes.

In an effort to reduce the atmosphere of tension and crisis between the US and the USSR - which leads both sides to such massive levels of defense spending - BENS is working with those in the business community who dealt with the Soviets over many years in the mutually beneficial area of trade. It is BENS' belief that these individuals, who have a first-hand knowledge of the "needs and fears" of the Soviet people, can have a major impact on the positions taken by American business in the debate on national security and a sound fiscal policy.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1981

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Center was established in 1981 in association with Brown University for the purpose of sponsoring research on US foreign and national security policy with a particular focus on the Soviet Union.

The Center sponsors research on US policy toward the Soviet Union and is not engaged in US-USSR exchange programs. During the first year of the Center's operation, the principal project was an examination of strategic and technical factors underlying the debate about whether and how to deploy the new missile, the MX. In addition to research by Center staff and consultants, our study drew on a two-day meeting with twelve experts including high-ranking Carter Administration officials as well as critics of that Administration's MX decision. The product was an essay for the general public. Other events included seminars and workshops on the following topics: US-USSR crisis prevention, the operation of the Standing Consultative Commission, NATO's ability to resist a Soviet attack, German-Soviet relations, the future of arms control and the role of the public in preventing nuclear war.

During the 1982-83 academic year, the Center's major project is an examination of the factors underlying Soviet international behavior. Ten scholars from academia and government were asked to focus on key international issues, construct a range of US options on each issue, and predict likely Soviet reactions to each option. Particular emphasis was placed on the analysis of what factors of history, geography, economics, ideology, national and individual psychology, or political system affected Soviet reactions in particular situations. These studies, presented as seminar papers during the year and published as Center working papers, provide the basis for a synthesis of views aimed at making US policy toward the Soviet Union more effective.

In addition to the Soviet Behavior Project, the Center provided support to Ralph Earle II, former Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and SALT II negotiator, to write a book on his experience in negotiating with the Soviets. The Center also supported research on Congressional handling of the MX issue, the role of the manned bomber in US strategy, and possible new controls on underground nuclear testing.

In carrying out research, the Center encourages interaction between the academic and government communities. The objective is to stimulate useful ideas concerning US-USSR relations and to contribute to a fruitful dialogue among scholars, professionals, politicians, and interested citizens.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goal of the Committee for National Security in the area of US-USSR relations is to provide general educational information, analyses and negotiation proposals for public and private sector use.

The issues and activities of the Committee for National Security include:

1) The second Women's Leadership Conference on US-USSR relations, June 1-3, will provide concise, timely and objective information on and analyses of US-USSR relations to enable women leaders to participate more fully in the national security debate. Further, it will provide resources for public education on US-USSR relations (materials, films, and exchange programs, as examples), and will encourage local and national organizations to include discussion of US-USSR relations in their activities.

2) Development of negotiations proposals.

3) Preparation of fact sheets, for distribution as a public service, on treaties and weapon systems.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), affiliated with the American Council on Education, is the principal private agency cooperating with the United States Information Agency (USIA) in the adminstration of senior scholar Fulbright grants for university teaching and advance research. CIES was established in 1947 by the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils - the American Council on Education, the American Council of Learned Societies, the National Academy of Sciences, and the Social Science Research Council. The USIA funds and administers the entire Fulbright Program.

The Binational Commissions and Foundations and overseas posts in consultation with the USIA propose the numbers and categories of grants, based on requests from local institutions, review applications of nominated Americans and arrange or confirm their academic affiliations, nominate foreign scholars for awards in the United States, make travel arrangements for grantees and their families, and provide orientation and facilitative services. In a country without a Fulbright commission or foundation, the U.S. Embassy develops the program and supervises it locally. The Senior Fulbright Program with the Soviet Union provides opportunities for up to 20 lectureships annually and has exchanged lecturers continuously since its inception during the 1973-4 academic year.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Council of International Programs (CIP) is a private, non-profit, volunteer organization with world headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio. Over the past 28 years, it has brought thousands of motivated, top-level professionals in education, youth work, community development and other human services from 110 countries to work for a limited time in our schools, libraries, hospitals and social service agencies. The CIP participants share themselves and their cultures and take a deep understanding back to their own culture.

By pooling the world's talents in a special exchange of people, skills and service, CIP meets its objectives which include the following:

1) To increase professional knowledge in human service fields.

2) To promote a realistic and positive image of all aspects of American life.

3) To increase understanding of the world's diverse cultures through contact among the participants themselves and with many different Americans.

4) To make a tangible contribution toward world peace by encouraging people from many countries to know and appreciate differences.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Documentary Guild's goal is to co-produce a television documentary with Gosteleradio (Soviet Television) and to broadcast it on the same day in both the US and the USSR.

The co-production, entitled DIALOGUE, focuses on three people from each country who attend a conference in Siberia in the summer of 1982. With them the issues of arms control, nuclear war, relations between the two countries, and the peoples' perceptions of each other are explored. After the conference the film follows the three Soviets and three Americans home to get a glimpse of their home and work lives.

DIALOGUE provides viewers of both countries with personal perspectives on the very pressing issues that affect both countries. It presents, in a non-adversarial manner, a brief view of what life and people in the two countries are like.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1982

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Educators for Social Responsiblity's goal is to de-demonize the Soviets, specifically for US students. ESR considers this the most important educational problem in relation to the threat of nuclear war. Demonization leads to dehumanization, making war more easily rationalized. The ESR goal is to educate the next generation of students so that it will understand the Soviet people, negotiate with them and survive together.

ESR's National Educational Resource Center assesses, reviews, and evaluates curriculum materials and all other publications on the nuclear arms race, identifies areas in which such materials need to be developed, oversees proposals for sponsoring them, helps to edit them and facilitates their publication, promotion and dissemination. These materials are for students, educators and parents. ESR has been able to identify weaknesses and vacuums in available material on the Soviets for student reading and understanding and for adults,as well. At least half of the Center's time is spent in the Soviet area.

ESR is co-sponsor of Ground Zero's "What About the Russians Week?" ESR also is co-sponsor of "Dialogue for Peace: American and Soviet Perceptions of the Arms Race," October 10-24, 1983, an exchange of US and USSR citizens sponsored by the American-Soviet Cultural Exchange, a private, non-profit, non-partisan US group which promotes cultural and educational exchanges between the people of the USA and USSR, in conjunction with the USSR-USA Society (a branch of the Union of Soviet Socialist Friendship houses). US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1979

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goal of the Esalen Soviet-American Exchange is to create alternatives to adversary relationships between nations by encouraging a broader understanding of human relations and human potential. It is an example of track two diplomacy in which unofficial non-structured interaction recognizes the human attributes or each side of a conflict and works toward easing the psychological tensions underlying confrontations. The project is guided by the idea that a deeper awareness of human possibilities could contribute to personal and social development in both American and Soviet societies and improve Soviet-American relations.

The Exchange Program has sponsored over 30 informal dialogues between American and Soviet scientists and scholars. Much of the program's success is based upon the personal friendships between Soviet and American colleagues that have grown out of shared professional activities. Projects now underway include: 1) dialogues among young political leaders; 2) cooperative endeavors among Olympic athletes; 3) an exchange of farm and garden technology for food production on small plots of land; 4) interdisciplinary working seminars on Soviet-American relations; 5) exchanges to promote cooperation in the fields of prevention, wellness, and holistic health; and 6) live satellite educational broadcasts between the US and USSR.

The program is aimed at assisting: 1) professionals to communicate with one another; 2) the American public to understand better the similarities and differences between the two nations; 3) experts and leaders in both societies to acknowledge the competitive nature of many aspects of the societies and to channel interaction into constructive projects.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The US Experiment in International Living aspires to a peaceful world where all people live in creative harmony. The purpose of the US Experiment in International Living is to develop a world-minded movement, open to all, committed to mutual understanding, respect and friendship, and to the attainment of full human potential.

The US Experiment in International Living is an educational institution which encourages and educates, others and ourselves:

1) to be culturally sensitive, and

2) to act responsibly in the world community by addressing basic human needs through a process of learning that involves the whole person.

Though the Experiment conducted student visits to the USSR for many years, 1960-1974, such plans have, in recent years, not met the format of EIL's original programs. Currently, groups of young Soviets do visit the Experiment but under the auspices of other organizations, i.e. Council of Churches.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Although the Facing History and Ourselves programs do not address US-USSR relations specifically, they do encourage education about controversial issues and in doing so involve US relations with other nations. The Facing History and Ourselves Project provides teachers and students with resources for studying topics that are complex and controversial, intellectually and emotionally challenging, and rarely treated in textbooks.

FACING HISTORY AND OURSELVES CURRICULA

1) Holocaust and Human Behavior
The use and abuse of power, obedience, decision-making and survival are the subjects of the nationally acclaimed Facing History and Ourselves education program, Holocaust and Human Behavior. By developing conceptual skills and imparting knowledge, Facing History and Ourselves helps to educate citizens as they learn to make informed judgments which democracy requires. The programs illuminate historical questions by encouraging participants to understand the consequences of choosing between competing values. They make it possible for teachers and students to reflect on issues that are meaningful to them in ways that stretch their intellectual and empathetic capacities. Facing History means facing the evidence of history. The unthinkable has happened; it can happen again.

2) Facing History and Ourselves Program
Facing History and Ourselves is a nationally recognized teacher training, curriculum development and dissemination project. The Program, taught in a variety of disciplines, is specifically designed for early adolescents in junior high and high school settings. The carefully developed methodology encourages students to understand more than one perspective in a dilemma, to place themselves in the position of another person, and to be willing to express ideas in class without fear of ridicule. When students think about history and its relationship to their lives as well as the consequences of their decisions and actions, they explore the roles and responses of individuals and groups confronting contemporary, difficult, and complex issues and dilemmas.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Forum for U.S.-Soviet Dialogue seeks to create an honest dialogue between young professionals of the two countries; to address issues which directly affect both societies, circumventing barriers of ideology in a candid and open atmosphere; to provide a better understanding of concurring and opposing views; to correct misconstrued information; and to defuse hostilities through familiarity and fairness.

The Forum's activities include an annual two-week conference (alternating countries yearly) of 80 to 100 young professionals, well informed citizens and serious students, who are divided into discussion groups based on expertise and personal interests to discuss: 1) Bi-lateral Relations, 2) Arms Control and Disarmament, 3) Youth, Education and Society, 4) Science and Technology, and 5) Economics and Trade Relations. Final communiques are published in the conference reports. Conference segments are disseminated via news coverage, interviews, etc. to the wider public. The overall goal of the Foundation is to seek peace through understanding on a person-to-person basis. FIC has student exchanges, hosting and adult study-tours around the globe. FIC co-sponsors the WORLD AFFAIRS and GREAT DECISIONS programs which brings experts to a forum for discussion and a study program about US-USSR affairs. FIC has an adult study-tour of 40 going to Russia in 1983. FIC is non-profit, non-funded and non-political. FIC hosts and "guests" internationally on a volunteer educational basis by personal contacts.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1982

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Friendship Force was organized in 1977 to conduct cultural exchanges between cities in the US and in other nations through home visits where Ambassadors and their Hosts can share a lifestyle for a week. Because home visits are not feasible in the Soviet Union, an interchange program was initiated wherein Ambassadors stay in hotels but endeavor to meet individual Russians on the street or wherever they go - and meet with Russian groups through the auspices of the USSR-USA Friendship Society.

The interchanges to the Soviet Union were initiated in January of 1982, and throughout the year a total of 11 groups, averaging 100 persons in each, travelled to the Soviet Union for 10 days to 2 weeks. They visited Moscow and Leningrad in the main. They took part in the activities as set up by Intourist, but also made attempts to introduce themselves and the program to citizens. Cultural meetings were held in the Friendship Society headquarters in each city. A total of 1008 Americans took part in 1982.

A similar program is taking place in 1983 with four groups of 80 taking part in the first four months of the year. An additional 6 to 10 groups will be scheduled in the remainder of the year. It is hoped that the interchanges in the fall months will be led by mayors of various American cities.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall objective of The Fund for Peace in the area of US-USSR relations is to find ways to improve understanding and to reach an accomodation between the two superpowers. To do this, the Fund is planning to develop a program of direct communication and exchanges between individuals in both countries.

The inaugural program will be a one-day conference involving 40 Soviet representatives and an equal number of Americans which will focus on Soviet and US perceptions of each other's policies and goals. This conference is being arranged in cooperation with The Forum for U.S.-Soviet Dialogue. This conference is scheduled for July 9th in New York City.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1973

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Global Education Associates seeks ways to enable US leaders/people and Soviet leaders/people to transcend simplistic ideological perceptions of each other and to recognize their common self interest in developing effective international institutions as a necessary framework for achieving true security in today's interdependent world.

GEA focuses on military and economic insecurity of both superpowers. Its research is done in the context of an analysis of the"national security straitjacket," as outlined in the book, Toward a Human World Order: Beyond the National Security Straitjacket. This analysis identifies a structural powerlessness of Soviet and American leaders - as well as leaders of other nations, rich or poor, capitalist or socialist - to give priority to basic human needs, confronted as they are by military, monetary (balance-of-payments) and scarce resource insecurity in today's interdependent but lawless global "arena."

GEA does research on the particular forms that this straitjacket takes and on world order alternatives for dealing with this powerlessness. GEA has associates in over 50 countries conducting workshops based on this research.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The major goal of Global Perspectives in Education, Inc. is to help American citizens improve their understanding of the world. The specific focus is on elementary and secondary education.

GPE serves as the national clearinghouse for global/international education in the US. As such it attempts to improve communication among individuals, programs, projects and organizations interested in precollegiate education.

Increased interdependence is a reality that cannot be ignored. The challenge is to understand the problems as well as to prepare for the opportunities presented by interdependence. GPE is helping meet this challenge. By assisting schools in incorporating a global perspective into the structure of their present educational programs, GPE can insure that children will have the intellectual tools required of them in the 21st century. GPE does not have any specific program related to US-USSR relations, but it does communicate with groups which have developed materials or are engaged in training or dissemination activities. GPE would appreciate information about materials or programs which might be useful in its global education program.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goal of Ground Zero's US-USSR program is to increase Americans' knowledge and understanding of the Soviet Union, so that the electorate is able to participate constructively in the selection of strategies for preventing nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Ground Zero works to point out the need for citizen education on the Soviet Union, and to provide balanced, general information on the topic as part of its overall effort to prevent nuclear war. Through a combination of Ground Zero educational materials and nationally coordinated educational events, such as "What About the Russians?" Week, Ground Zero's national network exists to provide community education on the issue. Its constituency is primarily school, religious and community groups, and its activities are specifically designed to prepare laypersons to evaluate national policies toward the Soviet Union and nuclear war.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Ground Zero Pairing Project is an outgrowth of Ground Zero Week, the nationwide week of community-based, nonpartisan nuclear war educational activities that took place in April 1982. The objective of The Ground Zero Pairing Project is to pair American and Soviet cities as a basis for establishing bridge-building programs wherein citizens in both countries may learn more about each other. In addition, The Ground Zero Pairing Project will prepare educational materials and sponsor communication and education programs that will be utilized by participating individuals and organizations within the Pairing Project structure.

Discussions with the Soviet government about Soviet participation in the Pairing Project were opened in August 1982 through the Soviet embassy in Washington, DC. At the last meeting at the Soviet embassy (January 1983), Project members were informed that the proposal had been forwarded to Moscow and was under review there. Indications were that it had been given a favorable recommendation by Soviet embassy personnel. As a first step in developing a framework for community participation in future educational programs within the pairing process framework, in the fall of 1983, The Ground Zero Pairing Project will organize a "Message-Experimental (M-X) Program." The M-X Program will involve the organization of packages of general information about individual local communities which will be sent to that target community in the Soviet Union with which the US community has tentatively been paired.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Nuclear Negotiation Project addresses the question of how best to carry on arms control negotiations, how to avert nuclear war in times of intense crisis, and how to resolve potentially explosive issues early on so as to render unnecessary even the threat of nuclear war. Work for this project began in September, 1982.

The Nuclear Negotiation Project is carrying out the following studies:

Nuclear Crisis Control Studies. The U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency has awarded the Project a one-year research contract to explore the theory of nuclear crisis management and to formulate six proposals (to be completed in September 1983) to improve the current processes of crisis prevention and crisis management. One of the activities is the preparation of a set of retrospective case analyses of US-USSR crises undertaken by ten Harvard students.

US-Soviet Negotiation Studies address the issue of how the Americans and the Soviets could negotiate for more effective arms control agreements. Preliminary findings have been presented to nuclear arms negotiators in Geneva. As part of this study, a graduate student at the Russian Research Center is doing a study of Soviet negotiations.

Studies on Conflict Resolution Systems. A set of working papers is being prepared addressing the following questions:

What changes in the way nations deal with their differences are required in a world in which nuclear weapons are not only not decreasing but proliferating? Can the sizable repertoire of possible conflict resolution processes ranging from negotiation through mediation and arbitration to peacekeeping be fashioned into a system of institutionalized firebreaks which could deal with conflicts in their earliest stages and could contain them in their latest? How can one build on the present system?

The Nuclear Negotiation Project is also collaborating closely with the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA). A research institute in Austria where scientists from East and West collaborate on world problems, it has set up a Forum on Negotiation which will meet for its first work session this July. This particular Forum will involve American and Soviet Scholars and diplomats among others working jointly on nuclear crisis negotiation, US-USSR negotiation and negotiation training. Project members are organizing this Forum.

In the future, the Project plans to write a book on US-USSR negotiation. The first half will address the question of what American negotiators ought to know about negotiating with Soviets; the second half would address the converse question of what Soviet negotiators ought to know about negotiating with Americans. Project staff will be working on these questions directly with Soviet scholars and practitioners on negotiations at IIASA.

The Project also plans to work with Soviet academics and diplomats at IIASA on designing joint diplomatic training sessions in negotiation for diplomats, businessmen, and trade officials.

The primary objective of the Russian and East European Institute for over 25 years has been the development of a broad interdisciplinary curriculum offering the best possible advanced language and area studies training relating to the Soviet Union and the countries of Eastern Europe.

The Russian and East European Institute is a research and training center for the advancement of general and specialized knowledge about the Soviet Union and all of the countries in Eastern Europe. The Institute offers a broad interdisciplinary curriculum that includes courses in 19 different departments and professional schools. Particularly strong Soviet programs are found in the departments of history, political science, economics, and Slavic languages and literatures, as well as in the School of Business. Indiana University maintains a large research library in the Soviet and East European field, an important component of which is a series of well-developed book exchange programs with academic libraries in the USSR. The Institute annually sponsors a large number of public lectures, films, and conferences related to the Soviet Union, and it operates an extensive public education program serving educational institutions and community groups at all levels. The Institute's graduate training program prepares students for careers in academia, government, and the professions.

It is currently undertaking a project entitled, "The International Exchange on Women in Economic Productivity," which will bring together a remarkable group of women community leaders from around the world to initiate a unique global dialogue on enhancing the economic productivity of women and their communities. Women from the Soviet Union will be invited to attend the Exchange.

The International Exchange, scheduled for March 1984, to which Soviet women will be invited, will explore predominately basic human needs and productivity issues, including food, water, housing, training, health services and more. The Exchange will focus specifically on self-help community efforts that can be improved through global sharing.

While the constituency for the Exchange itself will include nearly 80 women community leaders from 40 countries around the world, a variety of organizations will contribute to the planning of the Exchange and the identification of goals and potential participants.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1980

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Most of the current research and public education projects of the Institute for Defense and Disarmament Studies are designed to radically improve US understanding of the nature of Soviet military and foreign policy, and to cultivate a reconsideration of mutual opportunities for arms control and disarmament and for restraint in the use of armed forces by decision-making elites in the USA and USSR.

Within the general area of comparative study of American and Soviet military forces and policies, current IDDS studies and public education projects stress the nuclear arms race and interventionary use of conventional military forces in third world countries by the two superpowers.

The projects aim to delineate long-term trends in nuclear and conventional forces, current military and arms control policies, and opportunities for restraint grounded in limiting forces and policies in a more defensive direction.

In addition to research aimed at opinion-shaping and decision-making elites, the Institute produces popular articles and conducts an intensive program of public speaking designed to reach a broader cross-section of the public in the United States. The Institute also maintains contact with scholars and activists in Europe and with scholars in the USSR.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1982

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Institute's program on national security provides both factual analysis and critical alternatives on foreign and military policy. From its earliest years, analysis of US-USSR interaction has been a part of this. The goal has been to unravel the myths of the Cold War and provide a more balanced view of relations.

In 1982, the Institute began a joint exchange with the Institute for the Study of the USA of the USSR Academy of Sciences. It is designed to create a dialogue on measures to reverse the arms race.

In its broad educational program, IPS addresses scholars, activists, legislators and policy elites. In the exchange, the Institute brings together the leaders of the new citizens movement against nuclear war with arms control experts from the US and the USSR. Through publicity, television and film, it also addresses a broader general public. In the USSR, the constituency includes policy advisors, leading officials and a more general public reached through mass media. The issues of the exchange concern disarmament and the broad context of US-USSR relations. The issues in the Institute's scholarship also include both, with an emphasis on the arms race, and on crisis areas.

Activities include writing, speaking, seminars, and informal policy advice. The exchange consists of two major conferences, one in the US and one in the USSR, with appropriate public appearances before and after.

US-USSR RELATIONS: .10 (currently)

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1960

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The purpose of the International Marketing Institute is to increase worldwide understanding of the dynamic aspects of marketing and market-oriented economies and to promote greater use of advanced management practices throughout the world. This is a global effort with no particular emphasis placed on any one nation or region. IMI's attentions aimed at the Soviet Union are, therefore, equal to those of all other nations. IMI does not single out a specific US-USSR program, yet its interest in the USSR is no less than that of all other nations. A positive increase in US-USSR understanding should prove nothing less than beneficial to overall global betterment.

From the interest of IMI, this would include improved trade, economic and educational interaction between not only the United States and Soviet Union, but that of Soviet relations with other nations. In the past 23 years, IMI has played host to a number of Soviet participants to the Institute's advanced marketing and management seminars. In addition to course lectures and case studies, participants have the unique opportunity for increased understanding of markets and practices other than their own through Special Interest Seminars and interplay. An increase in Soviet participation in such educational forums would increase the Soviet's scope of foreign markets and other nations to the Soviet market, therefore encouraging and enhancing Soviet global economic trade.

IMI would encourage opportunities to further promote such international advancement through increased Soviet involvement in current educational programs and the development of new US-USSR trade and marketing forums.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1980

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War's overall goal is to prevent nuclear war and bring the nuclear arms race to a halt. More specifically, IPPNW strives to educate the public, and physicians in both East and West, and to foster dialogue among physicians and scientists throughout the world and especially in the US and USSR about the medical consequences of nuclear war.

Activities have included organization of two international congresses (the third is scheduled for June 1983), which have drawn delgations of physicians from many countries, including the USSR and other Eastern countries; the development and distribution of educational materials, including publication of a major medical resource on nuclear war, Last Aid: The Medical Dimensions of Nuclear War, which contains essays by Soviet, American, British, and Japanese physicians; the dissemination of information on nuclear war and on Soviet views of nuclear war through the media, including an unprecedented one-hour television show broadcast first in the USSR, and then in the US, in which three American and three Soviet physicians discussed nuclear war.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

IREX's primary goal is to maintain and develop communication between the intellectual, academic, and scientific communities of the two countries. In structuring and expanding an extensive program network of advanced research and intellectual exchanges, IREX has sought: 1) to normalize these contacts and maintain international standards of inquiry; 2) to insulate them from the intrusion of outside political controls and manipulation; 3) to increase opportunities for inquiry and discussion in contemporary policy and social science areas; 4) to expand programs with the minority nationalities of the Soviet Union in non-Russian republics away from the traditional centers of Moscow and Leningrad; 5) to develop a creative new pattern of cooperative projects on problems of mutual interest, involving groups of specialists and professionals from both sides working together in carefully targeted conferences, workshops, and study teams; 6) to disseminate the special insights and perspectives generated by the programs indicated above to broader public affairs audiences in the United States.

Activities include individual research exchanges, conferences, workshops, exchanges of data, parallel and joint research, grants to individuals and institutions to initiate direct contact. IREX's major constituencies are: 1) professional analysts of the USSR, 2) advanced researchers in all fields, 3) professionals in business, government, academia, and the private sector concerned with the USSR, 4) the broader public.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goal of International Student Pugwash's East West Exchange Program is to expose young people of the East and West to each other in the context of discussion of the social impacts of science and technology. This is accomplished in conferences sponsored by the International Pugwash Conferences on Science and World Affairs.

The issues pertain most generally to arms control and are discussed by Western students with senior Soviet scientists. After persuading these Soviet scientists of the program's merits, Student Pugwash is trying to involve Soviet young people in these events.

ISP's forthcoming international conference on "Science, Technology, and Global Responsibility," at the University of Michigan (June 20-26, 1983) will mark the first ever participation of Soviet young people in a Student Pugwash Forum. It is hope that this conference will set a precedent for further direct interaction between Eastern and Western students.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1982

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Internews facilitates the production of television news, documentaries and live coverage of issues and events concerning US-USSR relations through regular contact with television producers and network "gatekeepers" in the US and abroad. Internews maintains a video library of film and TV programs on international security issues for use by other producers and peace activists. The main goal is to foster broader understanding of the Soviet Union and to support cooperation through the mass media.

The constituency for Internews projects is the television audiences of the US and USSR. The specific issues are: the nuclear arms race; US-USSR exchange programs involving citizen-to-citizen approaches and contacts; improving the quality of US media coverage of the Soviet Union, with emphasis on reducing bias and misperception.

Activities for 1983 include:

1) Brokering of Soviet-produced films and television programs to American TV outlets. (In 1982, Internews worked with the International Physicians for Prevention of Nuclear War to arrange a national PBS broadcast of their historic Soviet TV roundtable.)

2) Development and production of a documentary film commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of US-USSR diplomatic relations, with a focus on the personal stories behind the scenes. (For PBS, November 1983)

3) Research on newsreels and archival film footage in Moscow.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The goal of the Lawyers Alliance for Nuclear Arms Control Inc., is to emphasize the importance of nuclear arms negotiations and agreements as alternatives to continuation of the nuclear arms race. To do this, the Lawyers Alliance educates its members, the public, the media and government officials to the successes of nuclear arms agreements, and the reasons for shortcomings and failures. The Alliance promotes international dialogue among legal professionals who have a common interest in finding peaceful and ordered solutions to the deepening nuclear dilemma.

A key element in arms control and reduction agreements, particularly those between the United States and Soviet Union, is verification. Lawyers and negotiators know that the capacity for verification is not a matter of "trust" but depends on the substance of the agreement, procedures for airing concerns and resolving conflicts provided in the agreement, and the existence of mutual or compatible self-interests. The Lawyers Alliance, which is an organization of US lawyers, judges, law professors and other legal professionals, seeks to bring US and Soviet lawyers together in private meetings to explore common grounds for strengthening the capacity to verify arms agreements. Prominent among the members of the Lawyers Alliance are former presidents of the American Bar Association, former Ambassadors, negotiators, and senior government officials; and leading members of the practicing US Bar. The Alliance anticipates meeting with a commensurate group of Soviet legal professionals. A possible specific objective would be to issue joint reports or draft agreements.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Meridian House International is a private, non-profit, world affairs center dedicated to enhancing international cooperation and understanding. To this end MHI conducts both cultural and educational programs - most directed toward providing services to international visitors, but some oriented toward helping Americans better understand today's interdependent world. These objectives are achieved by a series of orientation courses, study and observation tours, seminars, colloquia, forums, roundtables discussions, concerts, poetry readings, art exhibitions, etc.

To achieve greater international understanding, MHI seeks to discuss all subjects of general and current interest - political issues, economic matters, military security, social issues, finance, trade, arts, etc.

That portion of MHI's programs in 1982, specifically directed toward US-USSR relations is small. Only 1% of MHI's visitors are from Eastern Europe and only ½ of 1% from USSR. Of over 100 seminars, only four related to Eastern Europe and only one specifically to Russia.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

A formal agreement between MCUIA and Moscow State University was signed May 20, 1976. Ohio State University was selected as the lead institution. The original two-year renewable agreement has now been extended through December 1983. The goal of the program is to facilitate the exchange of up to ten senior scholars from the seven universities in the Consortium with Soviet counterparts. To date, seven Soviet scholars have participated for a total of twenty-one person months. Nine MUCIA faculty have visited Moscow State University.

Soviet and American scholars participating in the program have represented a relatively equal balance between the natural sciences, social sciences and humanities. Such balance was envisaged in the original agreement with Moscow State.

The MUCIA exchange is a valuable program because it represents an alternative to official and quasi-commercial exchange programs. Direct, semi-official exchange programs have a role to play in fostering closer, more flexible cooperation and communication between scholars in the sciences, social sciences and humanities. These are the ties that bind.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The main goal of Mothers for Peace is to bring Soviet and American women together to discuss ways in which women, as mothers joined by the common desire to create a peaceful world for their children, can work together to achieve this end.

Specific issues addressed by Mothers for Peace have been the arms race, the peace movement, women's roles, the common problems of raising children in a world threatened by nuclear destruction. The main activity, thus far, has been a joint meeting in Britain with British Mothers for Peace and women from the Soviet Women's Committee to discuss ways in which we might work together toward reducing the risk of nuclear war. We visited many different peace groups working in Britain (Scotland, Wales included) to share information and discuss specific topics being worked on in our respective countries.

Mothers for Peace is a brand new organization in the United States started by the six women who took part in a 10-day tour in Great Britain with their Soviet counterparts in an effort to talk about and learn about the desires and workings for peace. At the end of this 10 day tour, the group drafted a joint appeal to be sent to the UN Disarmament Session in New York in June. As yet Mothers for Peace has no firm budget, no "official" membership, but many people interested in Mothers for Peace and working to bring about a successful visit and tour in October of 1983.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

In reponse to the post-World War II growth in foreign students coming to the United States, the National Association of Foreign Student Advisers was founded in 1948 to promote the professional development of individuals working in the field of international education. Since that time the organization's name has been changed to the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs (NAFSA), reflecting significant diversification in membership and continuous growth. Today with more than 4,500 members across the country, NAFSA represents over 1,500 academic institutions, educational associations, local citizens groups active in foreign student affairs, and courtesy associates from embassies and legations in Washington. NAFSA's budget, now more than $1 million, supports a central office staff of 25 members.

In 1963 the NAFSA Field Service Program was established under a grant from the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, Department of State (now a part of the US International Communication Agency - USICA). The goal of the program is to improve the experience of foreign students in the US and US students abroad by strengthening the professional expertise of those on college and university campuses working in educational interchange programs. It is designed to serve every institution with foreign students and US students abroad, whether NAFSA members or not.

While the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs does not conduct programs directly with the Soviet Union, many of its members administer portions and phases of educational exchanges involving the Soviet Union. The scope of such exchanges is now so limited that creative new initiatives would be welcomed by NAFSA.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1970

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Executive Office of the National Education Association maintains contact with the Soviet Embassy in Washington and with the Educational and Scientific Workers Union of the USSR (ESWU). The general purpose of this relationship with the Soviet teacher union is the promotion of international cooperation and understanding, the exchange of information on education trends, concepts, and experiences, and the establishment of personal relationships between the leaders of the two teacher organizations.

The Association's relationship with the Soviet teachers' organization has been primarily exchanges of leadership representatives between the two organizations. These exchanges have concentrated on the following issues: conditions of work, structure and function of the unions, courses of study, instructional methodology, teacher preparation standards, educational outcomes of students, and other miscellaneous education-related matters, such as financing of education and control of educational policy.

Delegations of NEA leaders visited USSR in 1970, 1971, 1975, 1977 and 1979; delegations from the Soviet Union were received by NEA in 1971, 1973, 1976 and 1978. A Soviet delegation, scheduled to visit NEA in 1981, was denied entry visas by action of the US Department of State.

Delegates to either country usually visit the union offices, central union councils, if desired, government ministries and lesser governmental educational entities, universities

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The National Foundation for the Improvement of Education (NFIE), is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit educational-charitable institution, which was created in 1969 by the 1.7 million member National Education Association of the United States, the largest educational organization in the world. Its mission is "to improve the quality of education available to citizens of the United States and other countries." NFIE is making a major effort toward fulfilling this global mission with its Intercultural Programs in the Schools, which seek to educate the public in intercultural and international understanding as well as an increased awareness of the interdependence of all peoples in the world.

The NFIE, with the National Education Association and Listen to the Children, has proposed an international project to develop, publish, and disseminate in the United States and abroad, a book of children's art and creative writing, The Soviet Union As Seen by Its Children, together with supplementary instructional materials appropriate to various grade levels. The project would be the latest and potentially most popular of NFIE's Intercultural Programs in the Schools. It would be designed to educate the children of the United States and other English-speaking nations of the world, and through them the adults, to a greater understanding of and sensitivity to the culture of the Soviet Union - through the eyes and hearts of its children.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Resource Center for Nonviolence wants to turn the attention of peacemakers to the goal of lessening, and eventually ending, the Cold War between the US and USSR.

The Center's intent is to initiate concrete relations between some American people and some Soviet people, at least in Santa Cruz County where the Center is located, but also contribute to contacts in the Northern California and broader regions. The Center wants to address what in us identifies others as "enemy."

The Center offers study groups and public speaking to inform and engage persons in the Santa Cruz County area on issues relating to the cold war. The Center is exploring a variety of concrete means of relating with persons in the Soviet Union, including establishing sister city relations with a city in the USSR, the photo exchange initiated by the Association for Humanistic Psychology and the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and exchanges of people. The Center is catalyzing communication among persons and groups working on US-USSR relations in Santa Cruz County, in the Northern California region, and has the means and interest to facilitate networking of grassroots efforts to establish relations between American and Soviet people in as broad an area as needed. DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The National 4-H Council is an educational organization that utilizes private resources to help expand and strengthen the 4-H program. 4-H is the youth educational program of the Cooperative Extension Service. 4-H International programs contribute to understanding among people of the world through assistance, exchange and training programs.

Exchanges with the Soviet Union were conducted from 1976 to 1979. The objectives of the program were: to provide an opportunity for participants to observe and study the practical application of agricultural technology and to develop close friendships and cooperative relationships between people of the US and USSR.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The National Peace Academy Foundation (NPAF) has no direct involvement in any effort to affect the nature of Soviet-American relations or relationships.

NPAF is, however, engaged in a nationwide effort to develop information on and concern for the use of conflict management at the international level. NPAF expects, as further funding becomes available, to acquaint the interested public with developments in the field of conflict management and, not less important, the history of its successful use, both at the intranational and international levels. The Peace Academy, which will be established upon passage of legislation presently before Congress, will serve as an independent, federally chartered - and partly privately funded - institution involved in research, teaching and training at the graduate and post-graduate levels, as a clearingnouse for information on the non-violent management of conflict, and for the dissemination of information by a variety of means to the general public, both domestic and foreign.

In this indirect way, NPAF may be said to have some potential impact on the relationships between the United States and the Soviet Union.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1977

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

New Call to Peacemaking is a coalition of church groups representing the Society of Friends, the Church of the Brethren and Mennonites. It began in 1977 and has had three national conferences plus many regional and local seminars and consultations. The main purpose of the organization has been to strengthen peace concerns within these constituencies and then to work with other church groups to strengthen the concern for peace within the entire Christian community in the United States. New Call has only a part-time national staff, with much of the work being volunteered by the staff of member groups and individuals and local and regional ad hoc New Call groups.

The religious background and framework of the New Call to Peacemaking constituency has always believed that the religious perspective on conflict resolution and dealing with perceived "enemies" required considerable attention to developing interpersonal relationships across national and political boundaries. In the present political context, and particularly in terms of the superpower competition in nuclear weapons, exchanges with the Soviet Union have been one of the actions urged upon our constituent groups.

In May, 1982, the New Call to Peacemaking sponsored a delegation which spent a week in Washington and New York in dialogue with Soviet and American officials on the subject of disarmament. At the Third National Conference in June 1982, a resolution was adopted supporting the legislation proposed by Representative Udall to establish an exchange program with the Soviet Union. New Call groups in Eastern Pennsylvania are in discussion with staff of the Soviet Mission at the United Nations about plans for Soviet families to spend weekends in homes of New Call members.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The New England Society of Newspaper Editors has as its goals; to exchange information about who we are as a people and how we live; to exchange information about how journalists work and think; to define areas of agreement and disagreement on mutual political, economic and nuclear disarmament problems facing the US and the USSR; to share concerns about what newspaper editors can do in the future to foster better understanding among the respective readers about the people and problems of the two nations.

The Society has in the past and will again in the future address how journalists communicate to their readerships and how they can better foster understanding. Both sides have tried to better understand the role of the press in the others nation. The Society also is negotiating the establishment of several projects, including the exchange of columns between New England and Soviet newspapers, the exchange of college journalism students and the relaxation of restrictions by both governments on journalists from both countries.

PACS has an ongoing project in the area of US-USSR nuclear crisis risk reduction. A joint superpower "crisis control center" such as several US Senators have proposed, or other related measures, may be able to improve substantially US-USSR relations, in the sense of making potentially crucial improvements in the two sides' ability to forestall and control crises that might lead to a nuclear confrontation. There are other crisis control possibilities, short of a center, as well; these are also part of the project. This project is in the research and conceptual development stage. By its nature it does not have a "constituency" in the usual sense of the term.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goal of the Peace Links US-USSR programs is to provide a mechanism by which women in the US can link up with women in the Soviet Union to sustain peace on a long term basis.

The issues include the threat of nuclear war which affects all people and the recognition that women of all nations share at least one common experience, namely that of assuring a future for their children.

Activities will include a series of exchanges of people, information and exhibits.

Constituencies on the US side include women in civic, professional, social and church-related organizations in the heartland of the United States. On the Soviet side it is anticipated that the linkages will occur with women in their various professional and social roles.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

People to People International is a non-profit, private sector organization founded in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to promote world peace through international understanding. People to People currently operates 191 chapters in 27 countries. (There is no People to People chapter in the USSR.)

People to People International does not promote specific programs with individual countries, rather it attempts to provide opportunities for individuals to meet with people of all countries.

One of People to People's programs, the Civilian Ambassador Program, sends approximately 1,500 special interest groups overseas each year to meet with their counterparts. In 1983, many of these groups will travel to the Soviet Union as well as various other countries.

It is important to note that People to People attempts to promote goodwill and understanding between people of all nations. This is why it is very difficult to pinpoint exact programs between the US and USSR.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goals of Ranchers for Peace are citizen detente between US and USSR citizens at the grassroots level and the establishment of trust and mutual understanding as the primary means toward ending the nuclear arms race.

At the New York disarmament rally in spring of 1982, a group called Runners for Peace began a run across the United States which ended in Seattle. Along the route, the runners spoke and raised enough money to send five ranchers (Ranchers for Peace) and an interpreter-tour guide (Gary Browning, Brigham Young University) to the Soviet Union to speak with Soviet citizens and officials, specifically about the need to end the nuclear arms race and to try to determine whether barriers that now exist between the two nations are insurmountable. The group received considerable media attention in both nations during and following the trip, which was Dec. 9-22, 1982. Since then, the group's individual members have all spoken publicly, toured with slide shows and done local and regional media work about US-USSR relations and the nuclear arms race. Particular emphasis is placed on the MX missile and its negative effects on all levels, as the MX is a primary concern to the ranchers. The group has the ability to speak to a multitude of constituencies quite successfully and its identification with the land and its stewardship gives the group legitimate grassroots authenticity. The ranchers are from Wyoming, Utah, South Dakota, Colorado and Montana, which gives the group a broad-based regional flavor.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Sierra Club's unifying premise in the US-USSR work is the strong bond existing between the American and Soviet peoples over their mutual love of the earth and desire to preserve it. The Club's purpose is to promote that stewardship ethic inherent in both peoples.

In carrying out this objective, the International Committee of the Sierra Club oversees international policy and operations (through the Club's International Earthcare Center). Component committees of the International Committee are Committees on Protection of the Marine Environment; Protection of Natural Area; International Union for the Conservation of Nature; Trade and Application of Pesticides.

The International Committee's activities include: 1) a 1979 bilateral agreement with the All Russia Society for the Protection of Nature (Moscow) for information exchange; 2) Exchanges of delegations and literature as part of the 1972 bilateral agreement on Cooperation in the field of Environmental Protection. That agreement is still in effect. In May 1983, the third US delegation (6 members) on environmental law will meet its Soviet counterparts in Moscow. Since the 1972 agreement there have been six exchanges, 3 from the Soviet Union, 3 to the Soviet Union. The US delegations (with the exception of the 1983 delegation) have had 15-18 members, the Soviet delegations,12-13 members.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

Sister Cities International is the principal program of the Town Affiliation Association of the U.S., Inc., a tax-exempt, non-profit association headquartered in Washington, DC. The program concept grew out of a White House Conference called by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in September 1956.

The purpose of the Sister Cities Program is to increase international understanding and foster world peace by furthering international communication and exchange at the person-to-person level through city-to-city affiliations.

The National Association provides a mechanism for US cities to enter this program by assisting them in the process of linking with a city in another country. It acts as a coordinator and catalyst to encourage various types of Sister Cities programs and serves as a clearinghouse to gather, analyze and disseminate information. To accomplish this, the National Association works directly with local Sister Cities Committees and citizen volunteers, as well as with city officials. Sister Cities activities have expanded in 1982 to include over 700 US cities in 48 states affiliated with 986 "Sister Cities" in 79 other countries.

Locally planned Sister Cities programs foster communications across borders and include thousands of cooperative programs of mutual exchange of ideas, people and materials in a wide variety of cultural, educational, youth, sports, municipal, professional and technical projects.

SISTER CITIES INTERNATIONAL
Continued

The Sister Cities concept is unique in international programs. First, it is two-way - the give and take is shared by both sides. Second, it provides for planned and continuous contact between the cities involved and their citizens. Third, it brings together both municipal and volunteer resources at the local level. Fourth, it offers a mechanism at the community level for anyone or any organization to become involved in international relations. The national association does not have a US-USSR program, per se. Nor does the national association carry out exchanges. This is all done at the local level, through local programs. Currently, there are six US cities with Sister City affiliations in the Soviet Union: Baltimore, Oakland, Jacksonville, Houston, Detroit and Seattle.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1948-1971 Joint Committee on Slavic Studies
1983 Joint Committee on Soviet Studies

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Joint Committee on Slavic Studies, sponsored by the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council was instituted in 1948. It arose from a concern among scholars for creating a variety of tools for scholarly research and out of an interest in creating a reservoir of talent and knowledge about the Soviet Union and Slavic Studies. This was seen as especially relevant during World War II and in the post World War II era. The Joint Committee on Slavic Studies took on this work by fostering research and development and through the publication of a scholarly journal.

It was also during this time that the concept of area studies as an interdisciplinary approach to foreign cultures came to the fore. The Joint Committee on Slavic Studies played an important role in making area studies an important part of the social sciences.

During the 1950s and 1960s the conviction grew among scholars in the field that they would be best served by the establishment of a national membership organization and publication of an enlarged journal. This concern led to the formation of the AAASS which was seen as a more appropriate means of furthering scholarly work in the field. With the establishment of this organization and the winding up of various projects, the Joint Committee on Slavic Studies deemed its mandate as set out in 1948 was being best fulfilled elsewhere and disbanded in 1971.

In 1982 scholars in the Soviet/Russian field came to feel that the community could be well served by the re-establishment of a Joint Committee on Soviet Studies sponsored by the

The Institution has become an international center for documentation and research on problems of political, economic, and social change throughout the world. Staff members provide expert congressional testimony, consult for executive agencies, and engage in a wide variety of other public service activities. Users of the library and archives include scholars from all over the world who come to do research in the outstanding Russian and East European Collection.

Under the guidance of curator and senior research fellow Robert Conquest, the Russian and East European Collection has continued to grow. Among the highlights of important special acquisitions made during the year was the gathering of additional documentation on Poland's Solidarity movement. The Hoover Institution now possesses one of the strongest collections in the country, with nearly 200 serial titles, dozens of nomographs, and hundreds of pieces of organizational materials, minutes, communiques, correspondence, and posters generated by Solidarity and its branches. The collection also added seven microfilm reels of the Joint Chiefs of Staff records on the Soviet Union during the period 1946-1953, thirteen reels of microfilmed O.S.S. and State Department intelligence and research reports on the Soviet Union, and microfilm of British Foreign Office - Russian correspondence in the immediate postwar period. These and other special acquisitions augmented normal accessions during the year, which added some 5,000 new titles. Now totalling over 400,000 volumes, the Russian and East European Collection is one of the most famous in the world.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Stanley Foundation promotes study, research, and education in the field of international relations for policy makers, private experts, and the interested public. The Stanley Foundation is not a membership organization, nor is it a grant-making foundation.

In educating for peace, the Foundation deals with a variety of international issues but with heavy emphasis on arms control and disarmament. Topic selection is determined by current US foreign policy questions and issues at the United Nations and other international and regional organizations. The Foundation also focuses on current and future US foreign policy options.

The Foundation convenes policy conferences and publishes reports of proceedings, sponsors educational seminars for Congressional Staff and a variety of groups in the Midwest, produces a radio series, conducts global education activities in the local school system, and publishes a series of policy-oriented essays.

The Foundation considers US-USSR relations in the context of other international issues, especially disarmament, at policy conferences, citizen education activities and in its publications. Occasionally the Foundation focuses directly on US-USSR relations and has attempted for many years to establish an ongoing series of policy conferences to involve Soviets and Americans in equal numbers and to meet alternately in this country and the Soviet Union. This effort has not yet borne fruit.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications at Syracuse University administers multi-regional radio and television projects which are sponsored by the United States Information Agency (ongoing since 1962).

The basic goals of these projects are to familiarize those grantees who are chosen by the American Embassies in their own countries, with the United States and its people; to share with them the philosophy, principles and techniques of broadcasting as currently practiced in the United States; and to allow the grantees to share their broadcasting experiences and knowledge of their own countries with each other and the United States' audiences. These goals are accomplisehd through a series of group visits to broadcasting stations in smaller markets and an intensive three-week academic seminar at Syracuse University. During the three-week academic seminar at Syracuse University, the grantees have the opportunity to live with an American family. The families are chosen by the Syracuse International Center, a member of the National Council for International Visitors.

The International Broadcast Seminars has no direct relations with the Soviet Union. However, the organization has seven grantees from the Soviet Union participating in one of its multi-regional projects from 1976 through 1979. There have been none since 1979. Soviet participation in future programs would be appreciated.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1982

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The 194th General Assembly (1982) adopted Resolution on US/Soviet Relations: A Call for Reexamination and Reconciliation.

The purpose is to stimulate reexamination of attitudes and understanding of peoples of the Soviet Union and to seek reconciliation of the two nations and peoples.

The directives are as follows:

1) Calls upon all United Presbyterians to reexamine their own perceptions and attitudes regarding the people of the Soviet Union, acknowledging that easy acquiescence in popular rhetoric and stereotyped perceptions can result in the sins of bearing false witness and self-righteousness;

2) Calls upon United Presbyterians to study the history, culture, literature, art, and religious traditions that shape the peoples of the Soviet Union, seeking a more objective basis for understanding the relationship;

3) Urges United Presbyterians to seek every possible means of personal contact and relationship with Soviet citizens through travel, correspondence, exchanges of church leadership, and hospitality to visitors and students;

Continued

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, U.S.A.

4) Requests the appropriate ecumenical officers and agencies of the General Assembly to explore the possibility of establishing ties between particular congregations in the United States and the Soviet Union, and encourages United Presbyterian congregations to enter into such paired congregation relationships for mutual prayer and support when and if the way be clear;

5) Urges colleges and seminaries related to the United Presbyterian Church to encourage study of the languages, traditions, history, cultures, and religions of the Soviet peoples;

6) Calls upon governmental officials in both the United States and the Soviet Union to refrain from the rhetoric of implacable opposition and enmity through which each casts the other in the role of unchanging and unchangeable threat to basic existence and security, and to abandon the pattern in which each interprets every problem or tension anywhere in the world as the demonically inspired work of the other - noting that such practices feed the fires of suspicion and anxiety that make cooperation more difficult and, by contributing to the justification of an escalating nuclear arms race, make the world less rather than more secure;

7) States its belief that increased respect for human dignity and human rights and the elimination of the threat of nuclear annihilation are essential foundations on which the hopes for a more secure, just, and peaceful global future rest, and to that end

   a) Calls upon the United States government to be persistent in efforts to achieve greater protection of basic human rights in the Soviet Union and states in its sphere of direct influence, through the Helsinki review process, the United Nations, and bilateral or multilateral diplomatic effort;

Continued

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, U.S.A.

b) Calls upon the United States government simultaneously to pursue all possibilities for control and reduction of conventional and nuclear arms in a forthcoming and persistent manner.

Program in relation to 2,400,000 constituents and fifty-four related colleges is in process of development.

US-USSR PROGRAM FOUNDED: 1980

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The overall goal of the University in its US-USSR program is to provide a formal mechanism for exchange of faculty and information in an effort to promote a better understanding between the peoples of these two countries.

A formal exchange agreement between the University of Missouri (with the Kansas City campus serving as the lead campus) and Moscow State University has been in effect since January, 1982. Under this agreement, up to two faculty/researchers from each institution may serve as visiting scholars at the other institution. Currently, the University of Missouri scholars in residence at Moscow State University are 1) a mathematician and 2) an agricultural economist. As educational institutions, the constituencies benefitting most from this program are faculty, researchers and students in like disciplines. However, it is anticipated that those scholars coming to the University of Missouri in the fall 1983, will interact with business and industry leaders at the local and regional levels. In addition to the activities conducted under the auspices of this formal exchange, a delegation from USSR, headed by Rector A.A. Logunov of Moscow State University, will visit several American institutions in late 1983, including Argonne National Laboratories and Fermi Laboratory, as guests of the U.S. Government and the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Graduate School was founded in 1921 by the US Department of Agriculture. It is a unique organization which has provided practical, economicial, continuing education and training for over 500,000 adults interested in improving professionally and personally. As a non-profit educational institution located in Washington, DC, the Graduate School draws upon the expertise of over 1,000 faculty members as well as the rich governmental, industrial, and business resources in the nation's capitol.

The International Division of the Graduate School provides specialized training programs for officials and participants from other countries. Program areas include business, industry, finance, health, nutrition, natural sciences, energy, transportation, telecommunications, housing, and public adminstration. Since 1974 the International Programs Division has developed and conducted hundreds of technical programs for nearly 10,000 participants from over 120 countries. Courses have been conducted in English, French, Spanish, and Portugeuse both in the US and in other countries.

Since the Program is in the business of working cooperatively with other countries of the world in development, if conditions warranted it, the Program would be delighted to work with the citizens of the USSR in exchange, training, education and technical programs.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

US Servas is the largest branch of Servas International, with, in 1982, 1773 hosts and 1601 travelers. Servas branches provide orientation to hosts and travelers, and produce and distribute to travellers lists of hosts; normally, then travelers contact hosts directly to arrange a visit of from a few hours to some days, usually two.

Each year the Committee has a number of applicants who want to visit the Soviet Union. The Committee has only been able to give them two individual contacts and some addresses of Soviet and American organizations that might arrange other visits for them. There have been no Soviet Servas travelers but the Committee will be doing "special hosting" for some of the groups of Soviets coming to Minneapolis.

The organization thinks Soviet-American interchange, both at the leader and the ordinary citizen level, is critical, but does not know how to expand Servas in the Soviet Union. It is hope that Servas can continue being a host resource for other organizations bringing Soviets to the US.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES:

The Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament Education Fund seeks to foster a "people to people" exchange with the US and USSR to promote a better understanding of the issues surrounding the superpowers' nuclear arms buildup.

For the US-USSR project, WAND's main constituency is the mothers of each country. WAND has launched a campaign called "Millions of Moms." This year WAND's outreach is to mothers in the US but the goal is also to reach mothers in the USSR. (Currently, WAND has produced public service announcements by such noted mothers as Beverly Sills, Goldie Hawn, Sally Field, and Meryl Streep). WAND's campaign slogan is "Millions of Mothers Care: concern about the world's dangerous nuclear weapons arsenals crosses all boundaries."

The WAND Education Fund works with WAND affiliate groups who at times sponsor educational activities about US-USSR relations, i.e., the Soviet lecture series sponsored by the Cambridge Action for Nuclear Disarmament. Past Mother's Day events have included such projects as sending photographs of mothers and children to mothers in Russia.

REPORT ON GOVERNMENTAL ACTIVITIES

INTRODUCTION

This summary provides a brief history and current status of international efforts and official US government programs which have promoted Soviet-American interchange and dialogue. Several sources were particularly helpful in developing this analysis. These include the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the US Departments of Commerce and State, and the Helsinki Commission.

It is important to note that over the years a broad range of agencies have expended varying degrees of energy aimed at building a productive relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union. Many of the efforts have proven to be mutually beneficial.

Today, while official governmental contacts and exchange activities have been greatly reduced, unofficial private sector initiatives have continued to develop. These are described more fully in the OVERVIEW and individual organization profiles in the body of this Handbook.

I. UNITED NATIONS AGREEMENTS AND HELSINKI ACCORDS

From 1924-36 a small number of American scholars studied in the Soviet Union. However, during and immediately following the years of World II, virtually no exchanges took place.

The UN Charter, Chapter IX, Article 55, signed in 1945, provided for international economic and social cooperation in the post-war era. Pursuant to this document, nine agencies were established under the UN "umbrella" to promote multi-lateral exchange and cooperation:

1) International Telecommunications Union (ITU) provides means of cooperation between nations for international telephone service and other telecommunications.

2) International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) facilitates cooperation and encourages improvement in air traffic control, communications, and navigation.

3) Universal Postal Union (UPU) ensures uniform postal rates, facilitates international mail delivery and provides technical cooperation with less developed countries.

4) World Health Organization (WHO) works to improve health conditions, especially in less developed countries.

5) World Meteorological Organization (WMO) facilitates weather, promotes research, and encourages standardization of weather observations and statistics.

6) International Atomic Energy Administration (IAEA) oversees nuclear power activities to ensure that materials are not diverted to weapons.

7) Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO) promotes technical information exchange, ship safety, and liberal access to ports.

8) United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) provides financial and technical assistance in developing countries to improve the education and health of their children, and provides emergency food and reconstruction relief.

9) United Nations Environmental Program (UNEP) monitors environmental conditions, encourages sound environmental practices, combats desertification, pollution, and the abuse of toxic chemicals.

The most recent multi-lateral cooperative agreement resulted from the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. Concluded in Finland in 1975, it is known as the Helsinki Accords and includes a number of cooperative measures prescribed to improve East-West relations.*/ The "final act" is divided into three main sections. The second section deals with "Cooperation in the Field of Economics, of Science and Technology and of the Environment," including:

---

*/ Copies of this document are available from the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe, US Congress, Washington DC 20515 (202/225-1901).

1) Commercial exchange
2) Industrial cooperation and projects of common interest
3) Provisions concerning trade
4) Science and technology
5) Environment
6) Other areas - transport, tourism, migrant labor, personnel.

The third section covers "Cooperation in Humanitarian and Other Fields." This section calls for increased flow of people, ideas and information through various cultural and educational exchanges. The long-range success of this controversial document is still under evaluation.

II. BI-LATERAL AGREEMENTS BETWEEN THE USA AND USSR

The bi-lateral exchange of intellectual and cultural resources directly between the two superpowers first became a goal at the Eisenhower-Khrushchev summit of 1955, and was implemented under the 1958 "Agreement Between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. on Exchanges in the Cultural, Technical, and Educational Fields." This agreement provided for exchanges in radio, television, film, industrial specialists, agriculture and medicine; visits by representatives of cultural, civic, youth and student groups, theatrical, choral, and dance groups, orchestras, and other performers; visits by lecturing scientists and technicians, university delegations, and athletes; exchange of exhibits and publications; and the development of tourism. The agreement also initiated negotiations for direct commercial air travel between the two countries.

From 1959-72, these activities were sustained by a series of two-year agreements. Initially, the US role was administered by the National Academy of Sciences, and, since 1968, by the International Research and Exchanges Program (IREX). Both are nongovernmental, but government-supported, agencies. (For specifics, please see the respective organizational profiles.)

On June 19, 1973, Presidents Nixon and Breshnev signed a six-year "General Agreement on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation (TIAS 7649)", affirming the Basic Principles negotiated during their 1972 summit and committing the US and the USSR to seven cooperative projects and two agreements on the exchange of scientists and scholars.*/ The General Agreement called for an annual exchange from each country of 100 teachers, 35 artists, 10 performing arts groups, one or two circulating exhibitions, and 62,000 copies of the magazines Amerika and Soviet Life.

Some examples of cooperative science projects included: oil-processing methods, irrigation, geophysical interpretation, cloud-seeding techniques, fish bypass installations, turbine operation, sunflower breeding, and dairy cattle maintenance. Examples of exchanges included: joint seminars in higher education, economics, journalism, exchange of National Archives materials, circulating museum exhibitions and exchange of language. The programs in environmental protection, health, science and technology, and energy (especially atomic energy) generated the most person-hours of exchange.

A. Substantive Agreements

Between 1972 and 1974, the US and the USSR completed eleven agreements on scientific and technical cooperation. Table 1 illustrates these agreements and the executive secretaries responsible for their implementation in the US.

*/ The text of TIAS 7649 and the related TIAS 7343 are published in US Treaties and Other International Agreements.

On December 31, 1979, shortly after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the "General Agreement on Contacts, Exchanges, and Cooperation" expired. Under the circumstances, it was not renegotiated. Cooperative ventures under the scientific agreements were further reduced by President Carter's sanctions against the Soviet Union in January 1980. At that time, State Department officials implied that the framework was left in place to reactivate exchange and cooperation as soon as appropriate.

The Reagan adminstration has pursued a course of further reductions. Three of the eleven cooperative agreements expired in 1982 without renegotiation: Energy, Space, and Science and Technology. Likewise, this administration has attempted to restrict the activities of Soviets in the United States.

No policy level exchanges have taken place since 1980. No new programs are being organized. The Department of Energy has been instructed to pursue only those projects of substantial benefit to the US, resulting in 50% cutbacks on one exchange and virtual shut-down of another. A third project is continuing at two thirds of its former activity level.

The Agricultural Agreement is carried out by two working groups: economic, and research and technology. The former primarily benefits the US, the latter the USSR. This agreement is at present the only one renewed in 1983 by the Reagan adminstration.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development indicates that two of their cooperative projects are active at this time: industrial building and utilities. Not having sufficient budget to effectively implement these exchanges, HUD makes up much of its delegations from the private sector.

B. Students and Tourism

The Immigration and Naturalization Service reports that from October 1978 to June 1979, 4811 nonimmigrant visitors from the Soviet Union spent time in the United States. A recent study by the U.S. Tour Operators Association indicated that 50,000 US citizens travelled to the USSR in 1981.

Until recently, student and scholar exchanges with Soviet universities have been possible only through centralized arrangements based on formal agreements. Such arrangements were typically included under the umbrella of the US-USSR educational and exchange agreements which began in 1958. The principal exchanges have been carried out by the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX). IREX has been responsible, with US government support, for the administration of the basic parts of the educational section of the intergovernmental agreement.

More recently, the Council on International Educational Exchange and a number of quasi-commercial tour programs have conducted exchange programs for undergraduate and graduate students in the US and USSR. A small exchange of lecturers has also been organized under the Council on International Exchange of Scholars' Fulbright program. The National Academy of Sciences also conducts scholar exchange programs.

Within the past six years, direct exchanges between American and Soviet universities have supplemented the official programs. For a while, the State University of New York (SUNY) and MUCIA had the only private American scholar exchange programs with Moscow State University. Recently, Moscow State also began exchanging faculty directly with the University of Missouri and the California Institute of Technology.

C. Commercial Interchange

The one area of US-USSR exchange under government regulation which continues to flourish, in spite of tensions, is trade. President Reagan lifted former President Carter's grain embargo in April 1981. The Commerce Department estimates that 1981 exports to the USSR amounted to nearly $2.5 billion, in 1982 to slightly more than that. 1983 projections approach $2.8 billion. Soviet exports to the United States, though minimal, have also increased fairly steadily. The details and parameters of this trade are of significant interest and may have important ramifications for exchange in other fields. They warrant further investigation and analysis.

INFORMATION SURVEY REQUEST FORM

March 11, 1983

MEMORANDUM

To: Nonprofit Organizations Involved in the Development of US-USSR Relations
FR: Robert J. Stein, President
RE: Information Survey and Handbook for Funder and Organization Use

The Forum Institute has been asked by several foundations and individual philanthropists interested in relations between the United States and the Soviet Union to conduct a survey of groups currently involved in the development of US-USSR relations. The purpose of the survey is to provide funders and concerned organizations and individuals with an overview of the work currently being done by the organizations, the scope of their activities and their resource needs.

This is the second survey funders have requested the Institute to undertake in the past several months. The first, which was conducted in November-December, 1982, concentrated on arms control, nuclear weapons and peace issues. The results of that survey were presented at a meeting of 120 funders interested in such issues, and are contained in the 1983 HANDBOOK OF ARMS CONTROL AND PEACE ORGANIZATIONS/ACTIVITIES. Like the earlier survey, the results of this US-USSR survey will be made available to funders in the form of reports, HANDBOOKS and meeting presentations.

The survey is being initiated and sponsored by ISAR, the Institute for Soviet American Relations, in cooperation with the following organizations and individuals: Circle Fund, Cross-currents International Institute, Esalen Institute, the Funding Exchange, Kendall Foundation, Max and Anna Levinson Foundation, Ploughshares Fund, Tides Foundation, Dr. Jospehine Murray, and Salk, Ward and Salk. ISAR is a new foundation established to support creative approaches to the development and understanding of Soviet American relations. The policy of ISAR is to look for areas of common interest at all levels of both societies to identify cooperative projects of mutual benefit. We also wish to thank the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies, the W. Averell Harriman Institute for Advanced Study of the Soviet Union, the Center for Foreign Policy Development, and the Center for Population Reserach, Georgetown University for their advice on this project.

The enclosed survey will be used to collect the data necessary for producing an overview analysis. The form is short. We estimate that most groups can complete it in less than an hour.

The information gathered from the survey will be compiled into a handbook for distribution in June 1983. The handbook will contain 1) a compilation of the survey data establishing generalized information about the issues, activities, and interests of the responding organizations (no organizational identification will be attached to information in this section); and 2) profiles of each individual organization, written by the organizations in response to question I on the survey.

Each organization is being asked to respond to six requests:

- A short description of your organization and its activities present and future;

- Your perception of what additional efforts, by the US-USSR relations community, are critical in 1983 and beyond for a significant impact on such relations;

- An estimate of the amount of staff time your organization currently devotes to a range of activities and issues on US-USSR relations.

- The budget of your organization and amount devoted to US-USSR relatinos in 1982 and projected for 1983;

- A listing of materials on US-USSR relations produced by your organization; and

- A brief description of your organization's relationship with Soviet individuals and/or organizations and the opportunities and difficulties expected in those involvements.

The information requested is not intended to provide a comprehensive analysis of your organization. Quantitative information is being sought; there will be no attempt to make evaluations based on this data.

If you have any questions or suggestions please call Nancy Graham or Anna Mary Portz at 202/347-2931.

Due to the shortness of time, it is important that we get the completed forms back from you no later than April 18,1983. Thank you for your cooperation.

Information Form

Name of Organization	Executive Director
Address	Number of Full-time Paid Staff
City State Zip	Number of Person Years Devoted to US/Soviet Relations Work
Area Code Telephone Number	Year Organization Initiated US/USSR Program

PROFILE

I. Please describe the general purpose of your organization in the area of US/Soviet Relations and the nature of those activities:

a) Describe (in brief) the overall goals, of your US/Soviet programs.

b) Describe the specific issues, activities, and the constituency, both in the USA and in the USSR, addressed by your US/Soviet program(s).

II. Please indicate three critical activities you would like to see undertaken by appropriate organizations (yours or others) to impact significantly on U.S.-Soviet relations.

III. On the following page is a chart with which we plan to analyze the issues on which organizations focus and the activities in which staffs are engaged. Please indicate in the appropriate square the number of person years spent on any one issue and activity, i.e. if one person spends 40 percent of his/her time gathering materials by and about Soviet school children and 60 percent of the time arranging displays for PTA and other groups, enter .4 in the square at the intersection of "Materials Production" and "Education" and enter .6 at the intersection of "Citizen Education" and "Education." Complete only for staff involved in US/USSR relations full-time or part-time.
